Mark Macco, Architect

Inspired by a passion for great design, Mark Macco designs unique buildings that reflect their owners' tastes and lifestyles.

This recent home project was scaled so that the house opens up to the viewer and pulls one through with a sense of curiosity as to what's around the corner.

It is as if Frank Lloyd Wright visited Tuscany and then applied his Prairie elements to the Florida home.

A combination that works together in harmony, from the horizontal simple planters at the entry to the 5'x5' stained glass window in the great room. There is a Wrightian influence everywhere.

For Mark Macco, design begins with a conversation about vision and ends with a home where every surface reflects it. "Every detail matters...and anything is possible," he says.
